MEMBERS AT CAMP FIRE.

Society of Oregon Country Listens to Stories of Pioneer Days.
Gathered about an imaginary camp fire in Pythian Temple last evening, the members of the Society of Oregon Country heard stories told of pioneer days in the west, Indian legends and addresses embracing a variety of subjects.

The program was as follows: Piano solo, Miss E. C. Maytum; address on Indians, Mrs. E. C. Sloan; vocal solos, Mrs. Lawrence E. Gannon; recitation, "The Vampire," "Foliot O. Pulizzi," "The McKenzie River," C. W. Henderson; "The American Indian," A. W. Prescott; reading, "Camp Fires of the Pioneers," Benjamin Irving, and "Simpson, the Poet of Oregon," H. H. Gilroy.

Benjamin Irving presided at the meeting. Refreshments were served at the close.

Display by Boy Scouts.
The uniformed troop of Boy Scouts of the Y. M. C. A. has arranged to give a public display next Saturday night, The boys have been practicing for the last two months tent pitching, knot tying, fire lighting without matches, pyramids, bridge building, first aid to the injured and numerous other scout activities.

Under the leadership of the immediate supervisor of Albert M. Chesley, scout master of the District, the boys will display their skills in a variety of ways. The display will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building, 10th and G streets, N.W.

"Interests" Said to Oppose His Election to Senate.

GOT AFTER THE RAILROADS

Said to Have Won Their Enmity While Governor of State.

PROMINENT MEN LINE UP

Senatorial Primaries Promise to Be Exciting—Some Startling Virginia Figures.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

RICHMOND, Va., January 21, 1911.

Are the "Interests" to oppose the candidacy of Senator Claude A. Swanson? That is the question which is being asked in certain political circles at this time, and there is no reply by those who may be in a position to speak.

It is being pointed out that Senator Swanson soon after he was made governor, extended his hand to the railroads, to compete the railroads of the state to obey the mandate of the state corporation commission when that body directed that there should obtain in Virginia a flat two-cent rate for passengers. That case hung fire for some time, and Gov. Swanson was ready to force the issue and reconvene the general assembly to deal with the situation. Then the roads decided to comply with the order of the commission and to test the matter in the courts.

This was done, the railroads winning, but the dictation of the governor to bring the roads to book did not suit the taste of the railroads, and they have not forgotten his position in the contest. Now that he is in the United States Senate and is a candidate for reelection—rather a candidate for the nomination before the people—there is a suggestion in railroad circles that he is believed to be inimical to them, and that for that reason he will possibly encounter the displeasure of the roads when the campaign opens.

Just how this opposition may manifest itself is not known, and certainly the railroads cannot hope to elect a man who may favor, for such support would be fatal to his career. In case Representative Glass should enter the contest, and every one expects to believe that he will, there will be no other than a vote on rights so far as he is concerned. As matters stand, however, the constitutional convention which created the state corporation commission, and his own town of Lynchburg has had occasion to make a record in the past concerning the freight rates and discriminations by the railroads which either that city or that there is little choice between the two gentlemen on that score.

Prominent Alignments.

So far there have been many alignments of public men on the senatorial situation. Henry C. Stuart, former Gov. Montague, Harry St. George Tucker, former Attorney General Anderson and other gentlemen have announced that they will support Representative William Jones of the first district in preference to Senator Martin. These announcements have created no surprise, for they have always opposed Senator Martin, and the friends of that gentleman are not disposed to view with alarm the trend of the campaign.

Several of the papers of the state are expressing their opinion on the campaign. The situation at the present time is a bet two to one at this time on the outcome, and another says he is willing to bet $1,000 at this time that both Martin and Swanson will win. He is, however, one of the strongest of the many friends of the two gentlemen now holding seats in the Senate.

Some Startling Figures.

The annual report of the auditor of public accounts is just out from the printer. It covers the usual subjects treated, all dealing with the financial affairs of the Old Dominion. To begin with, the real values of the state are fixed at $475,672,323, an increase of some $75,000,000 over the previous year.

The program was as follows: Piano solo, Miss E. C. Maytum; address on Indians, Mrs. E. C. Sloan; vocal solos, Mrs. Lawrence E. Gannon; recitation, "The Vampire," "Foliot O. Pulizzi," "The McKenzie River," C. W. Henderson; "The American Indian," A. W. Prescott; reading, "Camp Fires of the Pioneers," Benjamin Irving, and "Simpson, the Poet of Oregon," H. H. Gilroy.

the west, finally going to the state of Washington. The man resisted the requisition sent for him by the Governor of Virginia, and ten days were consumed in fighting in the courts, the decision finally being that he would have to return.

The men had a difficulty, and Callahan said to have taken a pistol from William Harman and shot him to death.

Old Senators Quit Service.

Six of the members of the state senate of last session, men who have achieved prominence in the affairs of legislation, have announced that they will not again offer for that body. These are Senator George B. Kezelle of Rockingham, who has been in the body for more than twenty years; Don P. Halsey of Lynchburg, a nephew of the late Senator John W. Daniel; Frederick W. Sims of Louisa, an eminent jurist; Charles T. Lassiter of Petersburg, a brother of the late Representative Francis T. Lassiter; Edward E. Holland of Suffolk, who has been given a seat in Congress from the second district, and John J. Owen of Nottoway, who resigned his seat in order to accept a position in the Department of Agriculture.

It is understood that Senator J. P. Saunders of Middlesex will not again offer, but this has not been confirmed. Senator Sale of Giles will be another who will be missed from the floor of the senate after a service of some sixteen years, he having been made assistant general of the state when Gov. Mann was inaugurated.

School for Ball Players.

The Virginia League will this year be a veritable school for developing ball players. The magnates have gotten together and fixed the salary list at $1,200 a month for each club, but this will be raised to $1,500 before the season opens. This will cause a great change in all the clubs, few of the old players being retained, they receiving more pay than men expected to receive from the league. Already some thirty or more men from the amateur and semi-professional ranks of Washington and Baltimore have been signed, and the belief is that the "scouts" will have a chance to see possible stars here before the season opens. The teams will all be composed of young men.

CAPITAL INTERESTED IN MARINE CONGRESS

Washington Business Men to Fraternize With Delegates.

Prominent Speakers.

Washington business men, including members of both the Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce, will attend the meeting of the National Merchant Marine Congress, to be called to order in the banquet hall at the New Willard tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock for a session lasting two days.

The interest of local business people has been stimulated because present trade conditions will be largely discussed. Although Washington has no direct connection with foreign trade, its business men are interested in the subject, for trade in this country will affect business everywhere.

John Kirby, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, which has a membership of over three thousand and an estimated total capitalization exceeding ten billion dollars, will be one of the speakers, being scheduled to discuss the awakened interest in foreign trade on the part of his association.

Others to Deliver Addresses.

Other important manufacturers will also speak on allied subjects. Besides, Representatives William E. Humphrey, Richmond P. Hobson, D. E. McKinley, William S. Greene and ex-Representative James E. Watson are expected to address the convention.

The following delegates from the District of Columbia are expected to attend the congress: H. E. Temple, Fred J. Gauntlett, B. F. Pilon, C. E. Dickinson, John L. Erickson, Robert Persons, Howard C. Shober, E. H. Snyder, Owen E. Owen, John Mitchell, John R. Hey, Elliott S. Morse, O. J. DeMott, Percy S. Foster and E. H. Droop.

Government officials whose attendance is anticipated are George Von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, and Rear Admiral Albert B. Ross, R. E. Bradford and G. M. Baird.

National Legislators Expected.

Members of Congress in addition to those named who are expected to attend the Maine conference are Senators D. U. Fletcher and James P. Talliferro of Florida and George C. Perkins of California, and Representatives Frank Clark, H. D. Mays and S. M. Sparkman of Florida, J. W. Alexander of Missouri, James Francis Burke of Pennsylvania, E. A. Hays of California, George A. Lord of Michigan, W. W. Jones of Virginia, Herbert Parsons of New York, N. D. Sperry of Connecticut, William Sulzer of New York, William W. Wiley of New Jersey and George A. Bartlett of Nevada.

What is looked forward to with greatest interest is the action of the congress with regard to the Gallinger amendment, which provides for the payment of $4 per outward mile to vessels of the United States over, sailing from Atlantic coast ports to the Gulf and the Atlantic ports of Central and South America.

One year ago the total payment in any one year to $4,000,000, and it is expected the expenditure of this sum will be greatly increased by the increased trade with the Latin-American countries.

Over Four Hundred Delegates.

More than 400 delegates are expected to attend the congress, and although they have not as yet united in favor of any bill, it is expected that the Gallinger amendment will be their choice, and that they will give it their hearty approval and support.

President Taft has signified his desire to receive the delegates to the congress in the east room at the White House at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon. A special reception will be held for the delegates at the Capitol Monday afternoon by Speaker Joseph G. Cannon.

It is well known interest in the subject of a merchant marine and his strong efforts have been making for some time. The present session has greatly encouraged the advocates of the cause.

STRIKE FOR PEACE

Democratic Nominees for Senate on the Anxious Seat.

SENATE IS NOT ORGANIZED

Chilton and Watson, Selected by Caucus, Advise Compromise.

PLANS OF THE REPUBLICANS

Senators Refuse to Assist Organization, Governor Declines to Recognize Legality of Body.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

WHEELING, W. Va., January 21, 1911.

There is a general feeling that the West Virginia legislative tangle will be straightened out in a few days by a satisfactory arrangement between the democratic and republican leaders. This feeling springs from the belief that in order to obviate any question as to the legality of their election Clarence W. Watson and William E. Chilton, the short and long term nominees for the United States Senate, will procure a compromise.

The statutory date for the election of a United States senator is January 24, but the legislature could take a vote that day and recess from day to day for a month after that. To obtain an unquestioned title Chilton and Watson must have legislative approval and duly organized Gov. Glasscock has refused to recognize the body now sitting at Charleston as duly organized. Even the democrats do not care to maintain that fifteen senators constitute a majority of thirty. Proof of their doubts was illustrated in their party caucus, when Caldwell, who was seated in place of Hearne, voted for the "long shots" throughout the balloting, so as to keep from voting for the majority selections.

Among the Possibilities.

Perhaps there may not be any compromise. The fifteen republican senators may decide to remain outside of West Virginia until the time limit for electing a United States senator has expired, and the democratic members in session may decide to go ahead at Charleston in accordance with the organization they forced in the senate, by setting aside the resolution, and without an inquiry by committee in the prescribed way, so as to give them sixteen state senators. The general trend of opinion, however, is that Watson and Chilton, the senatorial winners, will advise patching up a treaty, even to the extent of giving the republicans the presidency of the state senate, and perhaps, the seating of Hearne and the elimination of Caldwell.

The situation at Charleston is unprecedented. The senate tie caused it. When neither side would concede the presidency, the republicans, fearing to enter the chamber, locked themselves in the governor's room, the democrats threatened with arrest. Not desiring to be carried forcibly into the senate chamber and destined to avoid physical strife and probably bloodshed, the republicans decided to leave the capital and take refuge in Cincinnati. The democrats assembled as they had for a week previous and on resolutions offered by Watson and Chilton, they decided to stay in the city.

Woods of Barbours, declared Caldwell instead of Hearne the legal senator from the Wheeling district. The resolutions cited that Hearne had "failed to make answer" to Caldwell's claim of 301 unregistered votes cast in the district. The secret of the republican disincorporation to enter the senate although the thirty senators were divided equally, politically, is that Kidd, democrat, was the temporary presiding officer, and he of the two contested filed by the democrats, the republican senators-elect from those districts would not be allowed to vote. Thus these contests could have been decided by a vote of fifteen democrats to thirteen republicans, after which everything would have been said adding for the democrats.

Republican Contention.

The republicans contended as a surface proposition that their objection to a democratic president of the senate was in his term ends, as the president of the senate in the event of the latter's death before his term ends, as the president of the senate in the event of the latter's death before his term ends, as the president of the senate in the event of the latter's death before his term ends.

was some method in this with some of them. McGraw's future place in the democratic caucus will be interesting to note. A senatorship was his abiding dream for years. The McGraw-Chilton factional fight, however, may end with the termination of the contest, for the McGraw supporters credit Watson's entrance into the senate with responsibility for McGraw's failure to land one of the plums. They concede Chilton's claims for recognition, but cannot locate any previous party work entitling Watson suddenly to enter and walk away with the high honor.
